Carbombs rocks Algiers compound

PARIS (AFP) — Suspected Muslim radical militants set off three bombs inside a heavily guarded suburban Algiers compound housing top government officials, injuring several people and causing serious damage, reliable sources said Friday. In the boldest strike yet against Algeria's military-backed government, the attackers set off a powerful carbomb and two other bombs Thursday inside the seaside compound known as the Club des Pins. This symbol of the ruling classes is considered one of the best protected facilities in the country. The blasts wonded several people and caused serious damage, the sources said. There were unconfirmed reports of one fatality. It was the first bombing by suspected Islamic fundamentalists of a residence of government officials, and the latest in a wave of bombings and other attacks by the fundamentalists against government buildings, security forces and civilians. It also came a day before the government Friday announced Nov. 16 as the date for the first round of presidential elections that the fundamentalists and legal opposition parties have said they will boycom.

Syria calls for review of peace talks

DAMASCUS (AFP) — Syria on Friday called on the United States to make a complete reevaluation of the Middle East peace process which has broken down on the Syrian-Israeli side. "An overall regulation of the peace process since its inception in Madrid in 1991 is necessary (to prevent) the situation from further deteriorating due to Israel's policies," state radio said. There has been "an obvious decline in the process which has made some lose enthusiasm and others lose hope they placed in the American initiative," it said. The radio urged "a return to the essence of the American initiative band on the exchange of peace for land." It placed responsibility for a review on Washington, which sponsored the Madrid peace process along with Russia. "All the accords made with Israel in the name of peace have not brought the region any closer to peace," the radio said. It condemned "the continuing state of belligerence in the occupied territories, the clashes in south Lebanon and the complete freeze in Israel-Syria negotia-

U.S. boosts its military presence in Gulf; Iraq denies reported army movements

BAGHDAD (Agencies) — Iraq has revealed new details about its clandestine weapons programme, the top U.N. inspector said Friday, and the cooperation appears linked to the defection of the country's leading weapons official.

Rolf Ekeus, a Swedish disarmament expert, said Iraqi officials blamed the defector, Lieutenant-General Hussein Kamel Hassan Al Magid, concealing the data.

The Iraqis provided Mr. Ekeus with new documents shortly after he arrived Thursday on his latest visit to Baghdad. "Iraq has started to hand

Washington reportedly pressing Jordan to suspend economic relations with Iraq

By Ayman Ai Safadi Jordan Times Staff Reporter

AMMAN - A high-ranking American delegation on Friday wound up a two-day visit to Jordan during which it held talks with His Majesty King Hussein and Prime Minister Sharif Zeid Ben Shaker over the recent developments in Iraq and pre-parations for the Middle East and North Africa (MENA) economic summit which will be held in Amman in Octo-

Under-secretary of State for Near Eastern Affairs Robert Pelletreau, who headed the delegation, reiterated Washington's commitment "to stand by Jordan against any threats to its security."

In a statement issued before departing Amman for Saudi Arabia on the second leg of the visit which also includes Kuwait, Mr. Pelletreau said the talks he held in Jordan were "frank and wide-ranging.'

The American assurances to stand by Jordan against any military threats coincided with the start of joint military exercises by the two countries in the Kingdom's southern desert (see separate story) About 3,000 American soldiers and 4,000 Jordanian troops are taking part in the exercise, which was decided weeks before the defection to Jordan of former Iraqi Minister of Industries Hussein Kamel Hassan Al Majid.

The U.S. has stepped up its campaign against the Iraqi regime since Lieutenant General Hassan called for the toppling of President Saddam Hussein at a press conference after Jordan granted asylum to him, his brother and their two wives, daughters of President Saddam.

Iraq has brushed aside as mere "hallucination" American reports that it could be planning military action against the Kingdom in retaliation against hosting the Iragi defectors.

But the U.S. remains adamant in its emphasis that Iraq could pose a threat to Jordan or Kuwait in light of the recent developments, moving the aircraft carrier Theodore Roosevelt to the Eastern Mediterranean after reporting "unusual" movement of Iraqi troops on its borders with Kuwait. The U.S. said it is willing to deploy 20,000 soldiers in the region to ward off any possible Iraqi threat.

Both Iraqi and U.N. sources have denied any unusual movement by Iraqi Jordanian and U.S. officials were tightlipped about the nature of the talks Mr. Pelletreau held in Jordan, but reports from Washington said that the American official asked Jordan to sever its economic ties with Iraq in return for an American pledge to convince Saudi Arabia to supply Jordan with oil. Reuters news agency quoted an unnamed Jordanian official as confirming the report. Asked whether the U.S. was pressuring the Gulf states to supply Jordan with oil, a State Department spokesman said in Washington: "I'm sure that we have ongoing conversations with our friends and partners in the Gulf about the ways that we could work together to ensure that we respond appropriately to this courageous de-that Jordan has taken." Diplomatic sources said the previously unscheduled visit was prompted by General Hassan's defection and was aimed at consulting with Jordan over the implications of the move.

Croatians seize Drvar, prepare Trebinje offensive

ZAGREB (Agencies) — Bosnian Croat forces reportedly captured a Serbheld town in western Bosnia Friday and U.N. officials said up to 10,000 Croatian army troops appeared poised to attack another in a double blow for separatist Serbs.

On another front, the United Nations said it was withdrawing its Ukrainian troops from the eastern Bosnian enclave of Gorazde in the coming days, and that British troops would be out by mid-September.

'A decision will be made in the near future on who will replace the British forces in Gorazde," U.N. spokesman Alexander Ivanko said. But no offers have been forth-coming and the British have insisted they will not remain after their tour of duty concludes at the end of this

A Zagreb television station reported Bosnian Croat forces had seized Drvar. 170 kilometres west of Sarajevo, and that Serbs had suffered "heavy losses" in the offen-

However, that could not be confirmed by U.N. or Croatian government officials in the capital.

Meanwhile, Croatia continued strengthening its forces in and around the historic Adriatic port city of Dubrovnik, raising fears of an imminent strike on the Bosnian Serb-held town of Trebinje 20 kilometres inland and to the north.

"There may be as many as 10,000 Croatian soldiers in the area northeast of the city," U.N. spokesman Christopher Gunness said. The situation in the area is extremely tense and we believe that offensive actions could be launched within days," he added. Buses and lorris carrying soldiers were seen heading towards the region in southeast Croatia. More than 4,000 troops had already been despatched there in previous days. Trebinje's Serb defenders claimed to have repulsed a Croatian assault on the town

Thursday, inflicting heavy casualties in hand-to-hand fighting, and to have ejected Croatian forces from two strategic hills, Serbian news agency Tanjug said. It has been from the Trebinje area that Serbs have shelled Dubrovnik, where soldiers and residents were preparing for the offensive into Bosnia which they predicted would begin Friday. Dubrovnik is a medieval walled city declared by the U.N. as a world heritage site.

"The war will begin tomorrow," one of a group of young army reservists said late Thursday as they sat drinking in a cafe.

"They interrupted my leave and I have to return to my base," added a young painter, who asked not to be Workers in the ancient centre were busy boarding up buildings and protecting them with bales of straw. While the risk of renewed war rose around Dubrovnik, the United States pressed on with an initiative which would trade land for peace in Bosnia and threaten military action for those who do not fall in line.

U.S. envoy Richard Hol-brooke finished a second day of talks with Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic and appeared to have won his support for the plan to end four years of war in former Yugoslavia.

Mr. Holbrooke had not comment as he left the talks to go to the Croatian capital of Zagreb for a second round of meetings with President Franjo Tudjman. He will then travel to the Bosnian capital of Sarajevo for his first meeting with President Alija Izetbegovic. Mr. Holbrooke said after

"We're definitely keeping abreast to the situation in Iraq and the defectors," he said, stressing that "if called upon, this unit is always capable of responding."

Washington has vowed to protect Jordan in the event of an Iraqi retaliation following Amman's granting asylum to the Īragis.

Security sources said at east 4,000 Jordanian soldiers will take part in the three-week exercise, which will be held in several locations in the Kingdom, including Aqaba.

Combat aircraft from the U.S. Theodore Roosevelt, a carrier deployed in the Eastern Mediterranean off Israel as part of the precautionary movements, will also take part in the exercises.

Sgt. Portman said the exercises "allow us to get together with the Jorda nians, pass on knowledge to them while they pass on knowledge to us, share our tactics and the way we do things."

Speaking to the Associated Press under seething temperatures and swirling dust, Sgt. Portman said the U.S. forces will "work on small units and move up to battalion-sized operation" by Tuesday.

BRIEF Apprehension surfaces among businessmen trading with Iraq

By a Jordan Times Staff Reporter

AMMAN - Jordanian businessmen are raising concern that a possible detenoration in relations between Amman and Bughdad could seriously undermine trade and economic ties and lead to the loss of what is left of the Iraqi market for Jordanian industries. In public and private comments, they say that the Bughdad government, which effectively controls the Iraqi economy and market through state-run enterprises, could call off trade the eastern provided the Kingdom offering the Kingd deals with Jordanian

"It was after more than three years that we managed to rebuild business ties with lraq, which was steadily dritting towards the West as well as the Far East for its needs in the absence of a steady lack of serious Jor-"nian interest in trade." said a businessman, who claimed he had a standing order worth JD 500,000 a month for food stuffs to

According to Department of Statistics figures quoted by the Central Bank of Jordan (CBJ) in its latest monthly bulletin, Jordanian exports to Iraq — food and medicine are exempt from the international sanctions against that country -- were worth JD 106 million in

The trend, as reflected in figures for the first half of this year, was upward, with an average of ID 12 million in Jordanian exports to its eastern neighbour.

In return, Iraqi exports to Jordan - crude oil and fuel oil, also exempt from the sanctions - averaged about JD 25 million a month. In 1994, Iraqi oil exports to Jordan were worth ID 291.34 million.

Prior to the Gulf crisis triggered by the August 1990 lraqi mvasion of Kuwait -which brought about the sweeping international sanctions on Iraq - annual Jordanian exports to Iraq were worth more than JD 300 million, including re-exports by Jordanian firms.

As such, the crisis itself was a serious blow to Jordanian industries, many of whom depended solely on the Iraqi market for their

A few of them were forced out of business as a result of the suspension of those products to Iraq in line with the sanctions, while others have been trying to diversify their marketing to other countries.

Some have been largely successful in finding afternative markets, while others are still struggling to survive in a highly competitive mar-

Re-exports from Jordan to lraq have largely come to an end by now, given that many Jordanian foodstuff firms and pharmaceuticals have entered the scene to offer substitutes which cashstrapped Iraq could afford.

WHAT'S GOING ON

Beyond concerns over possible immediate luss, however, is also fear of the potential impact of the defection by Hussein Kamel Hassan, minister of industry and minerals, on long-term Jordanian-Iraqi economic relationships. Businessmen note that concerted efforts launched by the Amman Chamber of Industry and the Federation of Jordanian Chambers of Commerce had led to the signing of agreements under which Iraq promised to give preference to Jordanian exporters and service firms in a post-sanctions period. But that promise, the businessmen assert, could be undermined by what they see as a major shift in Jordan's official position on

While no official organisation has formally met to discuss the situation and review means to protect the interests of Jordanian businesses against the impact of the dramatic twist in regional politics, industrialists and traders with links to Iraq are discussing the issue in pri-

At the end of the meeting, Prime Minister Sharif Zeid Ben Shaker urged the concerned authorities to start immediately implementing the plans discussed earlier and stressed that they should benefit from the advantages of the peace treaty with Israel and the new positive circumstances to convert Agaha into an important tourist attraction especially as the city is close to other major attractions such as the Dead Sea, Wadi Rum and

Stationery in short supply as students prepare for start of school year

AMMAN (J.T.) - With three days left before the start of the new scholastic year, students and their parents are having difficulty finding school supplies on the shelves of local stationery and book stores, despite assurances made by the Ministry of Supply that the current shortage will soon be over. In particular short supply are the 64 and 80-sheet note-

A spokesman for the ministry told the Jordan Television weekly morning programme that notebooks are available at the Civil and Military consumer corporations, in addition to book-

He admitted, however, a shortage of 35 per cent of the total requirements for the entire scholastic year.

The shortage is apparently caused by a rift between the Ministry of Supply and the notebook producers, who want a bigger profit margin in the wake of a worldwide rise in paper prices.

The ministry recently reached an agreement with stationery manufacturers under which it approved a rise in the prices of stationery as of May 31, 1995.

Since that date, prices of the 32, 64, and 80-sheet notebooks have been increased to 75, 125 and 150 fils respectively.

Despite the new price increase, notebooks are still in short supply, and retailers and bookshops refuse to sell these items in large quantities, claiming they only make a 2 fils profit on each notebook. Retailers say that other stationery items, such as pencils, pens, erasers, pencil sharpeners, tags and rulers bring in a larger profit than the notebooks because they are not priced by the govern-

The ministry spokesman said that the Civil Servants Consumer Corporation (CSCC) and the Military Consumer Establishment both received almost three million notebooks as of

But both establishments are only open to beneficiaries, and not to the general public.

Stationery manufacturers have produced almost 1,600 tonnes of paper during the period between June 1 and Aug. 6, and the market requirement for the whole scholastic year is almost 2,400 tonnes, the ministry spokesman said. He expected the current crisis, which be attributed to the high demand for stationery, to be over soon, because factories are working at full capacity to cover the market needs.

The issue will come under review Monday, Aug. 21, when representatives of the ministries of Education and Supply, the Amman Chamber of Industry, the National Society for the Protection of Consumers and representatives of uniform and stationery manufacturers will meet for further discussion of the problem, according to the Jordan News Agency.

Chechen negotiators warn they might quit peace talks

Chechen negotiators warned Friday they might break off peace talks after an outbreak of fighting jeopardised efforts to implement a Russian-Chechen military accord.

"For unknown and incomprehensible reasons, Russia is placing us in circumstances under which the peace process simply cannot be con-tinued." Akhiad Idigov. speaker of the Chechen separatist parliament, told Moscow Echo radio.

"After the bombing of Chechen villages by Russian warplanes it will be hard to persuade people to surrender their weapons and hand over prisoners," he said.

Russian warplanes bombed Chechen separatist forces Thursday near the village of Roshni Chu, some 60 kilometres southwest of Grozny, in an eruption of fighting which threatened to scupper the joint military accord signed July 30. A Russian defence minis-

Thai AIDS scare boosts child prostitution in Manila

MANILA (AFP) — The AIDS epidemic in Thailed has caused a rapid increase in child prostitution in the Philippines, a Filippino senator said Friday. India: rescuing hostages must be last resort SRINAGAR, India (AP) As security experts gathered in Kashmir, the Indian governor said Friday a rescue operation to free four Western hostages from separatist guerreillas must be "a last resort.

K.V. Krishna Rao, the federally appointed governor of Jammu-Kashmir state, said a military rescue would be difficult without risking the hostages' lives, but he didn't rule out the option if negotiations fail.

"You have to have patience to see that all the diplomatic and peaceful efforts have a chance to succeed. Mr. Rao said in an interview at the governor's mansion.

"If we launched an operation to rescue the hostages in the high Himalayas, the captors would probably see it coming and have time to decide to eliminate the hostages," said Mr. Rao, a retired general and former

Indonesian youths burn Australian flag in protest

JAKARTA (R) - Indone-sian protesters from government-sanctioned youth organisations raised the ante in a row with Australia on Friday, tearing, kicking and burning two Australian flags in front of its embassy.

The noisy protests by the KNPI Umbrella youth group cap weeks of similar incidents in Australia, where critics of Jakarta's rule over East Timor have burned Indonesian flags, triggering renewed tension between the two neighbours.

Judge Lance Ito Thursday ordered a nighttime jury visit to the scene where O.J. Simpson is alleged to have killed his ex-wife and her

Mr. Ito's order for the Sunday night field trip came over the strong objections of Mr. Simpson's defence team, who argued that the jury would only be confused becasuse the lighting conditions, the foliage and even the phase of the moon would not be the same as they were on the night of the murders.

Mr. Ito conceded he was concerned about the lighting and said his order was conditional on conditions being "substantially" the same. In particular, he said, he was worried about a land-

A welcome turn of the tides

THE SUCCESS of the visit of Foreign Minister Abdul Karim Kabariti to Saudi Arabia became an established fact when Saudi Foreign Minister Saud Al Faisal declared that Jordanian-Saudi relations have been restored to their normal level. The Saudi declaration came in the wake of Mr. Kabariti's talks with Saudi leaders, headed by King Fahd.

This development in bilateral ties is very significant given the tense relationship that resulted from serious differences that arose from the Gulf crisis and war in 1990 and 1991. The latest breakthrough entails, over and above its positive implications for inter-Arab relations generally, the appointment of a new Saudi ambassador to Jordan and Saudi participation in the upcoming Economic conference on the Middle East and North Africa (MENA), in Amman. In addition, the way is now open for a summit meeting to take place between King Hussein and King

There is no doubt that the recent events in Iraq have contributed to speeding up the search for a true reconciliation between the two kingdoms. All doubts about where Jordan really stands on the situation in Iraq should have dissipated by now and we hope our position on the Gulf crisis and war will have also been better understood by our Arab brothers in the Gulf. What Jordan is concerned with is ensuring a better future for all Arab peoples. Its decision to oppose the Western coalition against Iraq was predicated on its belief that a less damaging option to the interests of the Arab World could have been used to end the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait, which it unequivocally condemned. Its stand on the recent development on Iraq is also aimed at nothing but helping alleviate

We cannot but express our satisfaction at the restoration of full and warm relations between our country and Saudi Arabia. The interruption of fraternal contacts between us was but an aberration that was destined to end sooner or later. And now that we are on the brink of a new era in relations, we need to articulate and incorporate new guidelines and mechanisms that would assure the continuation of the present course. There is no better way to attain this objective than to institutionalise relations on firm and clear grounds that are solid enough to withstand transient misunderstandings.

arabic press commentaries

A WRITER in Al Ra'i Arabic daily accused the United States of violating the international law by demanding that Jordan play a direct role in changing the regime in Iraq and in interfering in that country's internal affairs against its own will. Fahd Al Fanek said that this was unacceptable to Jordan which realises that interference in other people's affairs had brought about many tragedies to the Arab Nation over the past 40 years and was in contradiction with the Arab code of honour which the Kingdom is currently formulating with the other Arab states. It is true that the United States has expressed willingness to protect Jordan from any Iraqi attack but the Iraqis are not poised to launch attack on Jordan because it is not in their own interests and would achieve nothing for Baghdad. Washington is trying to use any excuse for the sake of attacking on Iraq to destroy that country again and is trying to involve Jordan in such an adventure. Noting that Jordan is currently relying on Iraqi oil and that the Iraqi market imports 10 to 25 per cent of Jordanian exports, the writer said that President Bill Clinton who is enthusiastic about an attack on Iraq had not declared that his country would compensate Jordan for such a loss or would supply oil to Jordan free of charge or at half price. The writer warned of the danger of going along with the American plot against the Iraqi nation adding that American pledges to protect Jordan were not needed and

AL DUSTOUR daily focused attention on Jordanian-Saudi relations describing Foreign Minister Abdul Karim Kabatiti's mission in Riyadh as giving cause for optimism that inter-Arab relations are finally on their way to witness improvement following five years of strain. The daily said that the Jordanian people are looking forward to seeing their ties with Saudi Arabia on their right course again and that cooperation between the sister countries in various fields are restored at the highest level. As Mr. Kabariti had said Saudi-Jordanian ties had always served as an axis for building solid ties among Arab states and therefore Jordanians were hopeful that such relations would be restored and bolstered in the interest of the two countries and the Arab World at large, said the daily. Strong Saudi-Jordanian relations are much needed at the present as the Arab region is witnessing serious events, and as the Arab Nation is moving into an era of peace with Israel,

Jordanian Perspective

By Dr. Musa Keilani

A European decision worthy of praise

THE EUROPEAN UNION (EU) deserves praise and appreciation for its courageous decision not to fall victim of Israeli tactics by boycotting the. "Jerusalem birthday" party that Israel is holding in September. The EU move reflects a clear understanding not only of Arab and Muslim sensitivity over Jerusalem but also of Israel's carefully-orchestrated moves to consolidate its grip and claim over the Holy City through political, social and cultural moves.

No wonder the EU decision ruffled more than a few feathers in Israel, which was betting on European participation in the September bash to offer a measure of legitimacy to the Jewish state's claim to Jerusalem. If the EU states attend the "3,000th birthday" of Jerusalem, it would be a tacit endorsement of Israeli assertion that the Holy City was Israeli 3,000 years ago. As it turned out, the European outmanoeuvred the Israelis by bringing out the political element behind the "party" through pointing out that the final status of Jerusalem is an issue that should be negotiated between the Palestinians and Israelis and as such Europe was not ready to endorse the Israeli claim to the city.

We do not really know at this point how " much of Arab and Muslim lobbying went intoprompting the EU to politely turn down the Israeli invitation, but the move should remind us all that we should not relax our vigil against the continued Israeli campaign to achieve fait accomplis in Jerusalem at all levels.

We have to remember that the Jerusalem bash is slated to continue for 15 months, and we should expect to see a strong Israeli effort to bring in many reluctant countries to directly or indirectly participate in whatever the Jewish state intends to do during this period in the context of the Holy City.

Close in the wake of the European announcement of boycott of the "Jerusalem birthday party" came a tightening of Israel's opposition to foreign dignitaries meeting Palestinian officials at the Orient House, the headquarters of the Palestine Liberation Organisation (PLO), after the deputy prime minister of Sweden, Mona Sahlin, called off a visit to the Holy City and a meeting with PLO officials there. "Even courtesy calls to the Orient House has a political character these days," an Israeli minister was quoted as saying, referring to the called-off plan of the Swedish minister (Wecannot but recall that Sweden still remembers that it was an Israeli hand that killed Count Folke Bernadotte, who stood among many Europeans for his quest for justice and fairness in Palestine.

It is indeed ironical that Israel sees a "political character" to a foreign dignitary meeting PLO officials at the Orient House but fails to mention that the entire planning behind the "Jerusalem birthday party" is politically oriented. Not that we would expect Israel to publicly acknowledge that reality, but it is naive at best on its part to believe that the outside world is oblivious to its plans and designs.

We have always argued that Jerusalem could be one of the thorniest issues in any Arab-Israeli peace settlement. Israel also understands it but it is going its own way trying to change facts on the ground by the time serious negotiations start on the status of Jerusalem. By virtue of its occupation and control over Arab East Jerusalem, Israel is indeed in a better position to advance its quest. But a majority of the international community would not go along with it. That was the clear message that Israel should take from the European decision to stay away from its bash in, Jerusalem. Of course, we cannot expect Israel. single-minded as it is not to relinquish Arab Jerusalem, final status negotiations or not, to learn from the message. What we can expect now is a revival of moves by pro-Israeli and Israeliinfluenced members of the U.S. Congress to further extend American support for the Israeli claim. Although the moves many not amount to much in terms of a public American recognition of Israel's claim to Jerusalem as its "united, eternal capital" -- given the Clinton administration's rejection of the idea - the very debate over the issue could boost the Israeli stand.

Let us state once gain the reality on the ground: No matter what Israel does or intends to do, the Arabs and Muslims would not let go of · Arab East Jerusalem. Israel has secured some measure of legitimacy in the region through the peace process, but it is equally easy for the Jewish state to lost that legitimacy if it persists on its stubborn stand over Jerusalem.

Jordan has signed a peace treaty with Israel, which, in turn, acknowledges the Hashemites' special role in the Holy City. That special role definitely is part and parcel of the Arab and Muslim character and identify of Arab East Jerusalem. But a simple acknowledgement of the Hashemites role is not enough. We in Jordan would fight tooth and nail to establish that role. on behalf of the Arabs and Muslims without prejudicing the Palestinians' political rights in Arab East Jerusalem. Israel would be far better off understanding and appreciating that reality.

Jordan should not be embroiled in Iraqi affairs, writers urge

The Week in Print

Reviewed by Elia Nasrallah

THE FLIGHT of senior Iraqi officials and army officers to Jordan dominated the Arabic press in the past week. The situation in the occupied Arab territories, pan-Arab affairs and domestic issues also figures prominently in the editorials and in columnists' articles.

A writer in A! Dustour criticised the United States for seeking to involve Jordan in "hostile actions against Baghdad when Iraq openly declared its intention to maintain good relations with Jordan. We know that Baghdad is not planning to destroy its ties with Jordan at a time when Washington continues to insist that it would defend the Kingdom at a time when Washington continues to insist that it would defend the Kingdom in the face of alleged Iraqi aggres-sion, said Mohammad Kawash. The writer said that it was clear from Washington's attitude and through its pressures on Jordan to stop trading with the Iraqi people that the U.S. hopes to tighten the sanctions on Iraq and close its only remaining outlet to the outside world. He said Washington believed that Jordanian people's ties with the Iraqi people are based merely on trade exchange rather than brotherly or national considerations.

A writer in Al Ra'i said Jordan should seek to mend fences with the Gulf states and all other Arab countries and at the same time retain good relations with the United States. But maintaining good ties with the other Arab states should never be at the expense of destroying the Kingdom's ties with Iraq with which Jordan has a real interest. Jordan in fact has great and important interests with Iraq which provides it with cheap oil and which owes Jordan $1,100 million that can only be repaid through trade, said Fahd Al Fanek. Hence we have reservations over Jordan's employment as a springboard for changing the regime in Baghdad and we can only hope that any ossible change will be in favour of pluralism and democracy, said the writer. We hope that the Iraqi people will be offered the chance to take actual role in ruling themselves through an elected parliament which can help end the plight of the Iraqi people, the writer said. Stressing that Jordan is not facing danger neither is in need of protection from any source, Tareq Masar-weh, a writer in Al Ra'i. said that it was only natural for Jordan to grant asylum to Hussein Kamel Hassan and thousands of others from various Arab states over the years, because Jordanians are a hospitable people. The writer said that there was no meaning or justification for the big fuss created by the U.S. president over the defection issue because the Jordanian government has been clear about the affair stressing that it would not be involved in internal Iraqi affairs. The writer said however that any refugee living in Jordan should not be allowed to exercise any hostile activities against any regime in the Arab World especially that being away from one's homeland. one would have little influence on changing the reg-

Masarwah's views were echoed by Bassam Emoush, another Al Ra'i columnist who said that while accepting the Iraqi officials as political refugees Jordan can by no means allow these guests to launch campaigns against ime in his country.

the rulers in their own country. A political refugee should not exploit hospitality accorded to him here in order to harm Jordan's relations with other Arab states, he stressed. Noting that European countries abound with political refugees who are not allowed to exercise any political activity against their own nations, the writer said that refugees living in Jordan should respect the laws of this country and should refrain from any moves that could harm Jordan's stand-ng in the Arab World.

Under the title: Leave the Iraqis to decide their own internal affairs, a writer in Al Dustour said that it was important that Jordan remained neutral in the Iraqi question and refrained from anything that could be interpreted as a hostile action. Saleh Qallab said that there could be no justification or logical interpretation for Amman to involve itself in Iraq's internal matters under any excuse and should refuse to be lured towards such actions. The writer said that it should be remembered that being part of the regime until a week ago Hussein Kamel Hassan bears the responsibility for his own actions and that other Arabs have no say in deciding who should rule the lraqi people.

In the view of Hamadeh Faraaneh, a writer in Al Dustour, the Iraqi government has taken a very clever move by inviting Rolf Ekeus and his team to Baghdad to provide him with further secrets which it said were withheld by Hussein Kamel Hassan. By doing so the Iraqi lead-ership has not only shown willingness to cooperate with the United Nations but has sought to shake the credibility of Hussein

group who defected to Jordan. The writer said that by fleeing his country Hussein Kamel has not only lost credibility in the eyes of the Iraqi nation but has also lost access to future secrets and lost power of action against the regime to which he says he is opposed. The Baghdad regime is far from collapsing and if anything the move has strengthened the leadership and moved Iraq one more a step closer towards the lifting of sanctions, Faraaneh said.

The longer the delay in the implementation of the second phase of the Oslo deal between Israel and the. Palestine Liberation Organisation (PLO) the deeper will be the roots of the Jewish settlements in Arab lands, said Husni Ayesh, a writer in Al Ra'i daily. We have to remember that had the Palestinians accepted the U.N. sponsored partition of Palestine in 1947 they would have been in control of half of Palestine now. He said that the PLO should put the pressure on the Rabin government to redeploy its forces and ex-pand the Palestine self-rule authority as soon as possi-ble and so abort the Jewish settler's rebellion and their attacks on Arab lands and Hamadeh Faraaneh in Al Dustour also expressed the view that because the PLO is clinging hard to the Palestinian people's rights and the Arab rights in Jerusalem and Hebron a final agreement with the Israelis had been delayed. On the other hand because the Israelis were adamant in their own position and were succumbing to settlers wishes they were afraid to move on to the second phase of the Oslo agreement and expand the Palestinian self rule, said the writer. He said that the PLO should remain perseverant and should continue to put pressure or the Rabin government.

Indonesia anniversary raises questions for army

By Jeremy Wagstaff Reuter

JAKARTA — From the days when, armed with spears and sticks, they stormed Japanese outposts in the heady first throes of the independence struggle, Indonesia's soldiers have seen themselves as defenders of the people.

This view has long justi-fied a central place in political and military life, enshrined in the concept of dual function.

But as the world's fourth largest country commemo-rates its 50th birthday this month, this role sits uneasily with many Indonesians who see the men in green as something less than

"It has many critics," said retired General Soemitro, who headed the powerful operational command for the restoration of security and order in the 1970s, of the armed forces. known by its Indonesian acronym ABRI.

"ABRI cannot act against the current of public opinion, so a certain sense of accomodation and understanding should be shown by the ABRI, and there is an indication that ABRI has understood this," he said in an interview earlier this month.

Mr. Soemitro is one of many former military men who, for one reason or another, have turned from gamekeeper to poacher.

Even now retired General Abdul Haris Nasution, architect of the armed forces doctrine of "dual function," has long been a critic of its implementation.

The army was a late arrival during the heady days of 1945.

While the country's first political leaders took the plunge of proclaiming independence in the interregnum between the Japenese occupation and the return of their Dutch overlords. they were reluctant to take up arms to fight for free-

This left a painful gap in the movement's defences until, a few months later, guerrillas formed their own army, elected their own eader and set the stage for future tensions.

"Owing to its reluctance to act promptly and de-cisively in the first days following the proclamation of independence, the government ... lost its control over the Indonesian armed forces," wrote historian Salim Said in a book on the period.

Five decades later, the armed forces still sees itself playing a role beyond the purely military — from assisting villagers build bridges to having a definite say in government.

ABRI is small for the size of the country it is supposed to defend, and with internal threats from guerrillas in East Timor. Aceh and Irian Jaya and looming regional trouble spots such as the Spratty Islands, there are many who sympathise with it.

Numbering some 300,000 personnel, it is poorty, equipped to defend some 17,000 islands in an archipelago stretching the width of the United States. Under "dual function" most soldiers are not combat-ready, instead working as territorials.

This dual function has its detractors within ABRI's ranks too, sources close to the military say, including those younger ranking officers who see bridgebuilding and politicking as unbecoming a West Point graduate.

"There are many officers who support the notion of 'back to barracks' (propagated by some army officers)," one Indonesian journalist covering ABRI affairs said recently.

But there are others who see ABRI as defender of the faith, the only dependable force during the mayhem of the 1960s, when hundreds of thousands of Indonesians died in the wake of an aborted coup allegedly instigated by the Commun-

This role has ingrained a belief among many officers that ABRI deserves a continued say in the running of the country, and more controversially, should provide the next president.

This may depend on the present incumbent Suharto, who succeeded Sukarno in the wake of the 1960s bloodbath. He is a former general himself as well as an independence fighter. But while not overtly stating his own view on the matter, diplomats say Mr. uharto has been astute in clipping the military's wings, both for his own ends and to improve his somewhat tarnished image in the west. Most academics see ABRI acknowledging the tide of history, but remaining determined to retain their role as ultimate guardian of the nation's interests. "If a civilian becomes president they will not object so long as stability is maintained, so long as there is continued cooperation with ABRI in terms of its political role," said Yahya Muhaima, an academic and author of a book on ABRI.

"ABRI is more sophisticated than in the past. They know their political theory. about concepts," he said in a telephone interview earlier this month.

Debt relief to boost economy To the Editor:

APPRECIATION was widely expressed as U.S. President Bill Clinton decided to sign into law a congressional bill allowing the U.S. administration to cancel all of Jordan's debt to the United States. This debt was estimated to be at around $450 million. The debt relief is certainly going to be reflected positively on Jordan's economy. If not realised now, the long-run positive consequences of the cancellation of the debts are surely going to be Cancelling Jordan's debt will decrease its foreign obligations and will improve its monetary status, especially in the eyes of investors who prefer investing their money in a country that enjoys economic stability and growth.

One important feature that can be achieved through this cancellation of debt is the saving of foreign currency, which could have been used to service the debt. In this case, the interest payments can be allocated efficiently by using it in projects that can boost the Jordanian economy. More debt causes interest costs to rise relative to revenues. As a result, people will become increasingly fearful that the government might restore to "printing press" money in an effort to escape its loan obligations. This fear of rapid money growth and inflation would push interest rates up and make it even more difficult for the government to meet its debt obligations. If sufficiently intense, the fears of inflation could disrupt thne long-term capital market. And if the government did resort to "printing press" money in order to pay off its debt hyperinflation and a breakdown in the exchange system would result. The economy would be severely crippled. In conclusion, being indebted is an obstacle in the face of economic growth and development. Therefore, the debt relief is important for the continuation of development

By last November, Unita had been beaten to its knees: Executive Outcomers was involved in driving it from the oil area of Soyo, the diamond regions mewhat tamished in 3 around Cafunto, and from its urban strongholds.

Back in the new South Africa, the organisation is viewed with official disapproval. But when the first 30 South African mercenaries arrived in Freetown last May, they were hailed as saviours in the streets of this dilapidated tropical capital.

The rebels were 12 miles from the city, which had been bracing for the fall since Christmas. A detachment of Gur-

Executive Outcomes went as Strasser's government with an offer it couldn't refuse. "We said: 'you're in deep shit.' They said they couldn't pay. We said they could pay us when they could afford it." Within weeks, the South Africans trained 150 elite troops and freed the approaches to Freetown and then recaptured the diamond fields in the Kono district.

In an interview with The Observer, Mr. Strasser credited the "remarkable" turnaround in the war to Executive Outcomes. "We've had a number of successes," said Mr. Strasser, a shy man whose desk is filled with diplomatic gifts such as Oriental dolls. "They were so close to the capital - but now the security situation is impro-

As in Angola, Exeuctive Outcomes denies it has any role in actual combat. The most Mr. Luitingh will admit is that "you can't do battle guidance or planning if you sit hundreds of kilometres away. You need to be at the sharp edge." And when speaking to them, there is no doubt that Executive Outcomes' black soldiers - about 70 per cent of the mercenary force — have been engaged in combat. The newcomers include Angolans and South Africans from the est units of the old South African Defence Force. What is also beyond dispute is that the South Africans — who handle intellimost infamous and toughmunications, training and planning — have made all the difference between a fighting force and an illdisciplined band. But it is still too early to conclude that the war is over. The rebels cointinue to attack convoys on the road east to the cities of Bo and Kennema, where starvation is growing. Few days agos, a convoy of 75 trucks carrying food from Freetown to the interior was ambushed on the road to Bo. Government troops fled leaving the civilian drivers to be massacred. The South Africans were not there, and complained their advice had not been heeded. But suspicions that the rebels had been tipped off in Freetown highlighted another problem: who are rebels and who are govern-ment troops? Many believe there is only a superficial difference. Ordinary Sierra Leoneans are more trusting of the white South Africans gence, logistics, comthan of their own army.

They want one thing peace. Almost a quarter of the population has been uprooted by the war, at least 50,000 slaughtered since 1992.

At the same time, the Sierra Leone leadership realises that in the dense African bush there can be no final military solution, that it cannot kill all the rebels. It wants to weaken the RUF sufficiently to force it to negotiate, a repeat of the scenario in Angola where Unita's Jonas Savimbi capitulated last November.

The government has invited the rebels to a political conference to discuss democratic elections — it is confident that Mr. Strasser still plans to transfer power back to elected civilian rule in January. He says he will quit politics as soon as this happens.

"Since 1992 my major preoccupation has been to see an end to the security crisis... We need to reestablish confidence in the dits."

"We can play a helluva important role in Africa, economy and rebuild roads and infrastructure. Brigadier Julius Maada Bio, the chief of defence staff and Mr. Strasser's number two, told The Observer that the only lasting solution could flow from talking. "If he (the rebel leader Foday Sankoh) is pushed into a corner he will realise that it's useless to continue fighting."

Despite Executive Outcomes' successes, there are lingering, uneasy questions in the minds of educated Sierra Leoneans: If the government is not paying the organisation, to whom is it accountable?

The smart money in Freetown is on the other South African outfit, De Beers, which holds the country's lucrative offshore diamond concessions.

But Mr. De Beers has tried to put as much distance as possible between itself and Executive Outcomes, and privately refers to it as a "bunch of banMozambique.

In a region threatened by anarchy, it is not hard to see whose interests are best served by Executive Outcomes' intervention - the multinational owners of the mines in both mineral-rich

Angola and Sierra Leone. The organisatison is now helping to administer and guard Kono as a pocket of peace in a country that is oing back to the bush. Lebanese diamond dealers and traders, who fled from the rebels, have gone back to restart their lives and businesses. An offensive to clear rebels from the titanium and bauxite mines is about to get under way, as the next phase of the war.

Executive Outcomes argues that after the debacle of the U.S. and U.N. interventions in Somalia and with Bosnia preoccupying the West world is not too interested in little wars in Africa.

Neighbouirng Liberia is a nime example of a country being abandoned to its But a few hundred highly trained soldiers are returning Sierra Leone to a semblance of order.

Alan Paterson, a British consultant with decades of experience of mining in West Africa, says the sta-bility provided by the Exportant. His British clients have agreed to invest $11 million in Sierra Leone. Mr. Paterson, who was once managing director of the Sierra Leone diamond company, saw Kono two weeks ago and was horrified: "I saw human skulls blackened by the sun and rain. What right does any human being have to do that? Unless this business is sorted out in Sierra Leone, it is not unconnected to Liberia, it will spread to Guinea. The world should wake up to what's going on and support a government struggling to survive in a decent way."

In line with this argument, Mr. Luitingh, with a mysterious glint in his eye, hints at a potential next destination in Africa. "If Sierra Leone is to be stable. Liberia needs to be stable as well.

"If we can stabilise South, East and West Africa, it's going to be so much better for the whole continent. We are the only people on this planet willing to

UAE coffers reel under high spending and low oil price

ABU DHABI (AFP) ---High government spending coupled with weak oil prices have put strong pressure on the United Arab Emirates (UAE) coffers, official figures have showed.

The country's budget has suffered from a persistent large deficit despite attempts to diversify sources of income, the figures showed. Since 1990, the deficit in the Guif country's consoli-dated accounts, which com-prise the federal and local budgets, have run at around 10 per cent of the gross domestic product (GDP), one of the highest levels in the world.

"There appears to be clear evidence that the UAE economy has been running a considerable fiscal deficit in the neighbourhood of 10 per cent of the GDP in its accounts," the state-run Emirates Industrial Bank (EIB)

"There are very few coun-run a deficit of this magnitude on a sustained basis,"

Figures by EIB and the. central bank showed the deficit stood at nearly 15.9 billion dirhams ($4.33 billion) in 1994 compared with 16.1 billion dirhams ($4.38 billion) in

In the previous three years. the budget also suffered from a cumulative shortfall of 29.2 billion dirhams ($7.95 billion).

The figures showed the deficit persisted because of a decline in oil earnings and failure by the government to trim expenditure.

From around 48.7 billion dirhams ($13.26 billion) in 1991, total revenues plunged to 38.6 billion dirhams ($10.5 billion) in 1994. Oil income declined from 35.6 billion dirhams ($9.7 billion) to 29.9 billion dirhams ($8.14 billion) in the same period. Expenditure remained as equivalent to spending in previous years.

"Spending has remained high as the government is committed to meeting growing developing and military needs," a UAE bank manager told AFP.

EIB figures showed development spending, including financial aid to developing nations, accounted for nearly a third of the .total expenditure in the past four years. It stood at 16.5 billion dirhams ($4.49 billion) in 1994 and as high as 25.8 billion dirhams ($7 billion) in

No official figures were available on military spending but the UAE has been locked in a programme to bolster its armed forces since the Gulf war.

Unlike other Gulf oil producers, the UAE has not resorted to issuing bonds or seeking loans from international markets to shore up the budget deficit. Instead, it its national banks, with credits totalling around 12.6 biltion dirhams ($3.43 billion) in

The UAE, a federation of seven emirates, produces around 2.16 million barrels per day of oil, of which 40 per cent is owned by Japanese, French and other foreign partners under productionsharing agreement.

Weak crude prices have forced it to seek other income sources, introducing new fees on government services and raising them on existing services. It has also launched a campaign to expand its nonoil industries and is planning to boost gas exports and set up petrochemical projects.

The federal budget, which is financed by half the income of each of the country's seven emiratés, has also suffered deficits because of low oil prices. But in some years, the shortfall was turned into a surplus due to higher contributions by some emirates

Sudan begins to pay off regional bank debts

KHARTOUM (R) — Sudan has started to pay off outstanding debts to regional banks and funds in Africa and the Middle East, the minister of state for finance was quoted as saying.

The government-owned Al Sudan Al Hadith quoted Mohammad Khair Al Zubeir as saying his country had paid off delayed instalments to institutions including the Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC), the Jeddah-based Islamic Development Bank and the African Development Bank.

Mr. Zubeir described the repayments as positive steps which would improve ties between these institutions and Sudan, which has an external debt of more than $15 billion.

The International Monetary Fund (IMF), owed around $1.7 billion by Sudan, has considered expelling it for its inability to repay the debts. Khartoum says it is now paying monthly instalments and carrying out IMFbacked reforms.

The minister said relations with the African Development Bank had returned to normal since last May, enabling Sudan to draw loans worth $35 million for sugar growing, irrigation and petroleum projects.

Mr. Zubeir also mentioned new initiative to remedy Sudan's arrears with the Arab Monetary Fund and Arab Fund for Social and Economic Development. He gave no details, but said relations with them were impro-

LONDON (AFP) - The dollar suffered losses Friday on the still expect the recent uptrend to remain in evidence in the coming weeks. At 1540 GMT, the dollar stood at 1.4690 marks

DUBAI (R) — Growth in Gulf demand for gold in the second half of 1995 is likely to match or exceed the healthy 10 per cent increase in the first six months of this year, the World Gold Council (WGC) has said.

We expect at least a similar increase for the second half as all (Gulf) economic indicators have improved dramatically," WGC regional chief executive Rolf Schneebeli told Reuters.

WGC figures show demand in Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates (UAE) rose 10 per cent in the first half to 119.2 tonnes from 108.7 tonnes in the first six months of last year.

"Saudi's fiscal position is continuing to improve and we see continued and accelerating economic growth in the UAE," he said.

The Geneva-based WGC. owned by major gold producers worldwide, monitors about 75 per cent of the world's markets.

Mr. Schneebeli said Saudi gold demand rose 13 per cent in the first half to 99 tonnes from 87.3 in the same period last year, thanks partly to strong sales during the Muslim Haj pilgrimage.

"The overall gold demand in Saudi was boosted by better than expected gold sales during the Haj season. Trade indications are that the level of gold business in the 1995 Haj season (in April and May) was about 15 per cent more than that of 1994," he

Every year more than two million people flock to Islam's holy sites in Saudi Arabia to perform the rights of pilgrimage. Mr. Schneebeli said an improvement in the financial position of the kingdom, strapped for cash in the past few years due to weak oil prices and huge costs related to the Gulf war, had also helped lift demand.

The generally better trend in gold sales also reflects an easier fiscal position. as oil prices during the first half of 1995 were about $2 above budgeted estimates, he said.

A review of economic news from the Arabic press

APC chief outlines future plans

ARAB POTASH Company (APC) Chairman Ali Ensour expects potash sales to reach $160 million this year. Addressing members of the Amman Rotary Club, Mr. Ensour said the company would soon be announcing tenders to set up a plant to produce "pure industrial potash." He added that it was probably to complement this drive by entering into some of these secondary industries, such as potassium carbonate and potassium hydroxide, by the beginning of next cen-

Mr. Ensour said that other plans include expanding the areas of salt pans. Expected for completion in 1997 the expansion would provide additional raw materials to produce about two million tonnes of potash. Another industry to be carried out with the participation of the Jordan Phosphate Mines Company, the Social Security Corporation, the Jordan Investment Corporation and other investors, aims at producing industrial salt and table salt in 1996. With about 14 million tonnes of sodium chloride (table salt) sedimenting annually at the potash pans, the project entails refining a portion of this salt at a cost of $20 million and exporting 1.2 million tonnes of it for industrial uses while marketing 31,000 tonnes locally and in Arab markets as pure table sait.

The APC chief revealed that an experimental plant to produce magnisium oxide had been recently completed he expected to begin implementing this project in early 1996. Noting that magnesium oxide is used in manufacturing fire bricks at steel furnances. Mr. Ensour said the Jordanian product would be of high standard due to the good quality of magnesium salt and limestone available at the potash pans and in the area. He said that latest studies pointed out that the project would be extremely feasible and that production of 50,000 tonnes of magnesium oxide and about 10,000 tonnes of other magnesium products each year, is expected by 1999, at a cost of $90 million.

Studies have also showed excellent feasibility to set a project to produce 50,000 tonnes of bromine and other related derivatives, the APC head said, adding that discussions were still going on with foreign parties on obtaining the complicated technology and the necessary market for this industry which requires a $150 million investment. Another promising project that would complement the fertiliser industry in Jordan would be a potassium sulphate and calcium biphospahte scheme, Mr. Ensour said. He explained that this project aims at producing 75,000 tonnes a year of potassium sulphate fertiliser widely used in the Arab region from locally-available raw materials of potassium and sulphuric acid. From the chemical reaction of these two products hydrochloric acid is produced and can be twined into calcium bi-phospahte, used in fodder. The project, to be announced in a tender later this year, is expected to cost $75 million and to start production in 1999.

Future projects also in-clude producing 300,000 tonnes of compound fertiliser for export to the Japanese market by using locally-available raw material and ammonia to be imported from Arab Gulf countries. This Jordanian-Japanese joint venture, is expected to begin production in

Mr. Ensour described the fertiliser sector as being the largest of Jordan's industrial structure and as being the basic economic engine that attracts local and foreign in-

He noted that the fertiliser sector accounts for 50 per cent of all Jordan's exports of goods and for 10 per cent of the gross domestic product (Al Aswaq)

Amman Financial Market weathers fears over Iraq

By a Jordan Times Staff Reporter

AMMAN — Turnover at the Jordanian stock exchange rose by more than two thirds this week and prices edged up slightly despite political un-certainties over Iraq, one of the main markets for Jordanian products, following the defection of a high-ranking Iraqi official, brokers said.

They said, however, that the market remained largely upbeat amid signs that Parliament was nearing endorsement of several key economy-related laws that would liberalise the Kingdom's trade and investment Dolicies.

Also contributing to the optimistic mood in the market were reports that a new law on the stock market, the Amman Financial Market (AFM), as it is officially known, would open the door wide for foreign firms to come without bureaucratic

The weekly report of the market said turnover for the week ending Thursday was 4.5 milion Jordanian dinars ($6.3 million), up 73 per cent from the previous week's 2.6 million dinars ($3.64 million). Strong movements in Arab Bank stocks, which weighs heavily in the market, accounted for nearly one

The report said 2.2 million shares changed hands under 2.896 contracts during the week, and the average daily trading for the week was 900,000 dinars - five days of trading — compared with 700,000 dinars in the previous week, when the market operated for only four days because of a public holiday. Industrial stock accounted for 2.8 million dinars, or 46.3 per cent, of the weekly volume, followed by com-mercial banks with 1.44 million dinars, or 32.1 per cent, the services sectors 930,000 dinars, or 20.7 per cent, and insurance firms with 40,000 dinars or 0.9 per cent.

The official AFM share price index based on 60 major companies from among the 120 listed in the market closed at 155.54 points, up 0.9 points — 0.6 per cent for the week.

Commercial bank shares gained 1.6 per cent and services sector stocks closed 0.05 per cent higher. Insurance stocks shed 0.9 per cent and industrial shares dipped by 1.1 per cent.
The AFM report said

stocks of 89 companies were traded during the week, with 24 of them gaining, 52 closing with losses and the rest (13) remaining unchanged.

Curiosity surrounding Tyson carries non-title bout

LAS VEGAS (AP) — It's not a Leonard-Hagler or an Ali-Holmes. As a boxing match, it doesn't even come close to matching the two bouts between Riddick Bowe

From the chatter around the sports book windows on the Las Vegas strip to the MGM Grand Hotel, where people mill around hoping for a glimpse of Tyson. there's an aura of excitement in the air for the fight. The anticipation over Tyson's return is reflected in the celebrity list for the fight. which includes the likes of Hollywood actors Jim Carey, Arnold Schwarzenegger and star Shaquille O'Neal.

Even the most expensive fight ticket in the city's history - $1,500 for anything close to ringside — hasn't discouraged hotels from bringing in their high rolling gamblers for the bout.

In the dog days of summer, the fight has given a boost to the city at a time when casino business is generally slow. "It's an excuse for people to come to town, so they can see Mike Tyson," said one casino executive. "No one really cares about the fight.

It's an event, not a fight." Tickets for the fight were still available Thursday. although the cheapest seats at $200 each where all sold out. Hotel officials and promoter Don King were vague on just how many tickets were sold, with Mr. King saying about 1,000 seats remained for sale in the 16,000-seat arena. If the arena sells out, the promotion will realise a $15 million live gate.

his opponent. "We did very well on that fight," said Caesars executive Rich Rose. "But we had much more reasonable ticket

The pay-per-view television sales in the United States, at prices ranging from $39,95 to $49.95 per home. are also expected to be strong, although few believe the fight will top the Foreman-Holyfield bout as the biggest pay-per-view seller in America. But there's no lack of media interest, with some 1.100 media types credentialed for the bout. About 400 of those will watch the fight from the press room because there is not enough room in the arena for them. Bettors also are interested.

even though Tyson is a huge

At the sports book at the Mirage hotel-casino, book manager Jimmy Vaccaro said the fight has been the talk of bettors all week.

Tyson is a 17-1 favourite, but bettors can wager on whether or not the fight will last 21/2 rounds or on the chances of either Tyson or McNeeley being knocked down in the first round.

"The feeling here is anticipation of him coming back," Mr. Vaccaro said. 'It's not like it's a question of whether he's a great fighter. but everyone has their own opinion on how he will look. There is definite interest in

Mr. Vaccaro said most of the early money has been on McNeeley, but not necessarily because he's given much of a fighter.

"You don't hear anything about whether McNeeley is any good, but whether Tyson still has his timing," Mr. Vaccaro said. "They want to blow their money, but they want to blow it on McNeeley."

Lure of real gold works its magic

ZURICH, Switzerland (AP)

— There's nothing like real gold to inspire the stars of track and field.

In a meet featuring an all-star lineup of 23 world champions, distance runners Haile Gebrselassie of Ethiopia and Moses Kiptanui of Kenya smashed world records and earned $50,000 and a one-kilo bar of gold in the

Just three days after the close of the world championships in Goteborg, Sweden, the Zurich Weltklasse strengthened its claim Wednesday to being the most lucrative meet in the sport.

"It's only possible with a $5 million budget, of which $3 million is for the athletes," said Weltklasse organiser Andreas Brugger. "It is the golden four story and the gold bar story. It means the best athletes in the world." In a sport which has long agonised over professionalsm and prize fees, the Grand Prix meets in Oslo, Zurich, Brussels and Berlin have grouped together as the "golden four," backed by heavysponsorship and television

In addition to first-prize money of $7,000 and record bonuses at the individual meets, winners of any one discipline at all four events share 20 one-kilo gold bars between them. It's a clever marketing ploy which seems With the help of painkillers to treat a leg injury that left him sprawling in agony on the track in Goteborg, British Olympic champion Linford Christie staged a remarkable comeback Wednesday night. He won the 100 metres in 10.04 seconds ahead of Canada's Donovan Bailey, the champion in Goteborg.

Although uncertain for the Britain-vs.-United States competition in Gateshead, England, next Monday, Christie indicated he was still considering taking part in the Brussels "Golden four" meet next Friday. He won the 100 in Oslo earlier this season.

"I want to go to Gateshead but my priority is to be fit. I'm going to pick and choose my races very carefully," the 35-year-old Christie said, while insisting he wasn't in-terested in the financial re-

"I ran because I want to run. I don't run for money. It's a week too late and at the end of the day Donovan Bailey is the world cham-pion," he said.

Buoyed by his success and the chance to disprove "hasbeen" newspaper headlines, Christie rolled back from declarations that he would quit competition this year. However, he reiterated that he has no plans to defend his Olympic title in Atlanta next At the other end of the age-scale, 22-year-old Gebr selassie vowed to go for a 5,000-10,000 double in Atlanta to complement the world records he now holds in both disciplines.

In the most spectacular performance of the Zurich meet, Gebrselassie shattered Kenyan rival Kiptanui's two-month-old 5,000 record by nearly 11 seconds.

Gebrselassie clocked a sensational 12 minutes, 44.39 seconds — a time which surprised himself as much as nyone else.

Kiptanui immediately vowed to regain the record, but it will be tough. "Kiptanui is strong. But this record can only be broken by a man, not a machine," Gebrselassie said.

The Ethiopian angered his federation by refusing to race the 5,000 in Goteborg, set-tling just for the 10,000 to allow him to save his energies for Zurich.

While Kiptanui lost one record, he gained another as he became the first man to break the eight-minute bar-' rier in the 3,000-metre steeplechase with a time of course to break the record last week in Goteborg but slowed down in the final 200 metres because he wanted to set the mark in Zurich. "I decided to do one thing

Kiptanui is expected to challenge Noureddine Morceli's 3,000-metre world record of 7:25.11 when the season continues with the Grand Prix meet in Cologne, Germany, on Friday. Kiptanui set the 3,000 record once before in Cologne. in 1992. He went on to shatter the 3,000 steeplechase record three days later in Zurich. Now he is hoping repeat the sequence in reverse order.

Several other world champions are set to complete in Cologne: Bailey, Allen Johnson (110 hurdles), Wilson Kipketer (800) and Derrick Adkins (400 hardles). Meriene Ottey and Gwen Torrence are expected to clash again in the women's 200.

Massive challenge awaits Schumacher

LONDON (R) — A massive challenge awaits Michael Schumacher at Ferrari next season when he tries to deliver the Italian team's first drivers' world title since 1979.

The German defending world champion acknowledged the size of his task after Ferrari announced on Wednesday he would be joining them from Benetton.

Schumacher, at 26 not only the youngest man to have won the championship but also the first German, will have to succeed where such men as Briton Nigel Mansell and Frenchman Alain Prost have failed.

Mansell eventually returned to Williams to win his solitary world title in 1992. while Prost, after three successes with McLaren, succeeded the Englishman when he won his fourth title with Williams in 1993. Both arrived on a wave of euphoria. but left under a cloud.

"I am sure Damon (Hill) will be the favourite to win the championship next year," said Schumacher at Silverstone during testing with Benetton on Wednesday.

"He will have the best car, but I accept that. For me, the attraction of Ferrari is as much the challenge as it is the traditions and history of the team.'

Schumacher's move from Benetton caused many raised eyebrows among the Formula One fraternity. Having won the team's first driver's title in 1994, he seems poised to repeat that success this year and placed in a strong position to go for a potential hat-trick in 1996.

But instead of staying, he seems to have traded his ambitions to win races and championships for the longer-term challenge of reviving Ferrari and the obvious short-term attraction of a massive financial package. Some sources have sugested he will earn as much as

$30 million in the first year Despite his sincerity in explaining that he was moving to Ferrari because of the challenge, most cynics have found it hard to accept any other theory than that which suggest financial considerations have triumphed over sporting ambitions. Schumacher's background - he is the son of a bricklayer — and his upbringing were characterised by economic prudence at home and in his early racing career and it . is certain that he and his manager Willi Weber are delighted to have completed a move to F1's most famous

His greatest rival, Britain's Hill, whose 1996 contract at Williams was also confirmed on Wednesday, may not have negotiated as big a pay day as Schumacher, but looks assured of starting 1996 as the title favourite.

His team mate at Williams will be Canadian Jacques Villeneuve, this year's winner of the Indianapolis 500 and favourite to win the Indycar World Series drivers' title, who will replace another Briton, David Coulthard.

Schumacher's place at Benetton will be taken by Frenchman Jean Alesi, who leaving Ferrari at the end of the year, a move confirmed in the third of the three major announcements on Wednesday.

After five unpredictable years at Ferrari, which have produced only one win so far, Alesi may find the discipline and professionism of Benetton a more suitable environment for his temperamental talents. Equipped with a Benetton car powered by the standardsetting Renault Vio engine which has carried Schumacher to such success this year, Alesi should be capable of mounting a serious title challenge. Only Hill, also powered by the Renault Vio. appears to have the package and the experience to match

Michael Schumacher

Schumacher may find that Ferrari's plans to switch from a V12 engine to a Vio next year will hamper his and the team's initial progress and leave him, like Mansell and Prost, frustrated.

Much may depend on the future decision to be taken by Austrian Gerhard Berger, who has been Alesi's team mate for the last two years.

He is understood to have the choice of staying with the Italian team as Schumacher's partner or moving back to McLaren as the experienced man needed by engine suppliers Mercedes-Benz. Berger's decision will also ffected the future of Coulthard, who could either replace him at Ferrari if local favourite Nicola Lorini does not get the job or move to McLaren himself as Finn Mika Hakkinen's team mate if Berger decides to stay.

Top woman mountaineer feared dead with 6 climbers

LONDON (AP) - Hardly resting after becoming the first woman to climb Mount Everest alone and without carrying oxygen, Alison Hargreaves took on a Himalayan peak feared as a killer.

Though fearing the worst.

Jim Ballard said Thursday he had not given up hope that his wife survived Sunday's avalanche in which seven climbers were reported missing on 'K-2, in Pakistan's Karakorum Range. "We shouldn't grieve," Ballard said. "She was actually where she wanted to. be. She had climbed the mountain. She was the first woman to climb Everest and K-2 without supplementary oxygen and she was on her way down.

"At least inside she would have had the happiness of reaching the summit," he

Among the others feared dead were American Rob Slater, Jeff Lakes of Canada, and two Spaniards, said Nazir Sabir, an organiser of one of the expenditions. He said one body had been found but that identities of the missing were' not expected until a member of the party reached the mountain town of Skardu, probably on Saturday.

"There are very little details, only that one of the bodies was found near Camp 2 and buried. There was no name or anything," Mr. Sabir U.S. embassy officials in Islamabad confirmed that Slater was missing, along with at least four others.

Mr. Sabic, contacted Wednesday by telephone in Skardu, said five to seven climbers were caught in an avalanche somewhere above the 8,000-metre mark of the 8,560-metre peak. In May, Hargreaves, 33, entered the record books by reaching the top of the 8,847metre Everest alone and without carrying oxygen.

She briefly returned to her husband and two small children at their home in Spean Bridge, Scotland, then headed back to "the roof of the world" to tackle K-2. She wanted to go on to the thirdhighest peak - India's Kanchenjunga — this year.

In a BBC interview shortly before she left, Hargreaves pointed out that K-2's is known as a "killer mountain"

because it attracts very bad

"When we go climbing we obviously minimise the risks and if we thought it was that risky we wouldn't go climb-ing," she said. "Anybody who went off thinking that there was a very high chance they wouldn't come back --it's a very unfair thing to do especially with a young fami-

The only other British woman to have stood on the summit of K-2 was Julie Tullis in 1986, but she did not survive the descent

"I've been rehearsing this dreadful day for nearly 10 years," Mr. Ballard told BBC Radio. He said he was planning to tell Tom, 6 and Kate, 4, that their mother might not be coming back.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) -For gymnasts, maybe more than any athlete, competition doesn't last long. Since 1948, only 12 American women have gone to two Olympics, only three have made it three times. Since 1920, 28 American men have competed twice in the Olympics, two have gone to three. and one, Alfred Jochim, went to four.

Four women and four men at the National Gymnastics Championships are trying to make a second Olympic team roster. "This is one of the big events, especially this year because everyone is pointing towards the Ólympics," John Roethlisberger said. "This is the groundwork."

Roethlisberger, a threetime collegiate and threetime U.S. national all-around champion, was a member of the 1992 Olympic team. He, Trent Dimas, Jair Lynch and Chris Waller are hoping the nationals will be a springboard to Atlanta.

On the women's side, Dominique Dawes, Shannon Miller, Kerri Strug and Kim Zmeskal would like to re-

"If you get to go to two Olympics you're lucky. Youhave to be 15 to be an Olympian," said Strug, who was the youngest member of the team in 1992. "You might make it again at 19, but 23 would be kind of old."

The four-day nationals began today with Miller, a twotime champion, trying to reclaim the all-around title she won in 1992 and 1993. Last year, Miller was second to Dawes in the all-arounds and event finals.

Miller, who won five Olympic medals in Barcelona, has had to learn to cope with her growing body. In Barcelona, Miller was 1.45 metres and weighted 31 kilogrammes. Now 18, Miller is 1.52 metres and 43 kilogrammes.

The long-time coach, with host of former champions to his credit, watched his latest up-and-coming star, 13year-old Dominique Moceanu, wrap up a solid second in the compulsories in her first event as a senior.

"I'm perfectly satisfied," Karolyi said Wednesday night. "Its a good start in the first competition in her life in the senior division." Moceanu, of Houston, Texas, scored 46.95 overall.

Although Karolyi would not say that he did not want his budding phenomenon to win the women's all-around, he was certain he did not want her to face what another of his students went through in 1992.

That was the year Kim Zmeskal was expected to take the Olympics by storm, only to end up with only a bronze medal from the team

For nearly a year before the Olympics, Zmeskal was the darling of the media and the fans. Magazines from Time to Sports Illustrated featured her, network television trooped to Houston to interview the 36-kilogramme powerhouse who was dubbed the favourite for what may be the most valuable medal of the summer olympics — the gold in the women's allaround.

It began in September, when Zmeskal won the World Championship in Indianapolis and suddenly found herself a celebrity. Leaving her hotel there, she was surrounded by more than 1 000 shricking fans clamouring for her attention. For the next 10 months, the cries got louder and the pressure greater.

It was on Mr. Karolyi's mind Wednesday night when he weighed the joy of a possible first-place finish by Moceanu against the pressure it would put on her. "The last thing I would like to see is the Zmeskal syndrome in '92," Karolyi said. "I don't want too much pressure on her now. She's still having fun out there. That's the way it should be." The pressure was instead on Shannon Miller.

Miller, who opened on one of her favourite events, the uneven bars, scored a 9.8 to tie Moceanu for second. She' moved into the lead after a 9.825 in the floor exercise and stayed there with another 9.825 on the vault to finish with 47.13 points. "All four events were cru-

Israeli positions under fire in Lebanon

MARJAYOUN (AFP) - Hizbollah guerrillas attacked positions of the Israeli army and its proxy militia in South Lebanon early Friday without causing casualties, the South Lebanon Army (SLA) militia said. The guerrillas fired rocket propelled grenades and machine gun fire at the Israeli outpost of Dabshe and shelled the SLA position at Kfarreman. About two hours later the Sojod outpost. where both Israeli and SLA forces are deployed, also came under fire. Hizbollah claimed the attacks in a statement released in Beirut. The pro-Iranian guerrillas "scored direct hits on the Dabshe position and a fire broke out," a

No quick solution to dispute with Iran — UAE

ABU DHABI (AFP) — The United Arab Emirates (UAE) ruled out on Friday a quick solution to its dispute with Tehran over three Gulf islands occupied by Iran. "It's a thorny question and all signs out of Tehran suggest that a solution is not near" for the dispute over the Abu Musa, Lesser Tunb and Greater Tunb islands, Sheikh Sultan Ben Zayed Al Nahyan, the deputy prime minister, said. The UAE "continues its dialogue and diplomatic activities with Iran to try to modify its outlook on this matter," he said, adding that Tehran's occupation of the strategic islands was "un-Islamic." Sheikh Sultan said hte UAE would be forced to take the dispute to the United Nations and other international bodies "to regain its legitimate rights over the islands." The UAE asked Iran in October to accept arbitration by the International Court of Justice at The Hague. Tehran implicitly rejected the demand, saying the islands "belonged to it for eternity."

Swedish prime minister to resign

STOCKHOLM (AFP) - Prime Minister Ingvar Carlsson announced Friday that he will resign as Swedish premier and leader of the Social Democratic Party next year, saying he had succeeded in leading Sweden out of a deep crisis. Mr. Carlsson, 60. will step down as party leader during its congress to be held March 15-20 of next year and would 'immediately afterwards" hand in his resignation as prime minister to the speaker of parliament, Birgitta Dahl. Mr. Carlsson would not comment on who he thought would succeed him as the head of the party and government, leaving the choice up to the ruling Social Democratic Party. In power from 1986 to 1991 and again since legislative elections in September 1994, Mr. Carlsson has headed the Social Democratic Party since the assassination of Social Democratic Prime Minister Olof Palme in February 1986. 'At the extraordinary congress in 1996, we will leave behind us a period of difficult, but necessary and ultimately successful, decisions. This will be a good time for a new leader to take charge of the Social Democratic party, ahead of the 21st century." Mr. Carlsson said. Summarising his actions as party leader and premier since the party's return to power in September 1994, he recalled his success at bringing Sweden into the European Union in January 1995 and of "having had the strength to take the difficult responsibility" for decisions "necessary" to set the country's economy straight.

Drug traffickers, forgers bust in Lebanon

BEIRUT (AFP) — Lebanese police have arrested drug traffickers and smashed a counterfeiting ring in a drive to crush organised crime, officials and the press reported on Friday. Well-informed sources linked the crackdown to reports that Syria, the main power broker in Lebanon, has lifted its protection of certain Lebanese businessmen in an effort to help Interpol and the Beirut authorities to eradicate crime. A man identified as the leader of a multi-million drug trafficking operation and three women were arrested separately and their testimony led a judge to issue warrants for 15 other people on the run, they said. The four testified they had managed to smuggle 45 kilogrammes of heroin from Lebanon to the United States, Canada and Europe over the past two years, according to the respected Al Nahar daily quoting unnamed security sources. The women were used as courriers. They swallowed capsules of heroin concealed in surgical gloves and received between $10,000 and $25,000 for each run depending on the amount they carried, the report said. A iudge also issued several arrest warrants for suspected counterfeiters who are believed to have distributed around $25 million in fake notes and one million forged marks in the Middle East and Europe, the report said.

Algeria announces Nov. 16 as date for election

ALGIERS (AFP) - Algeria on Friday announced Nov. 16 as the date for presidential voting rejected by the opposition and by outlawed Islamic fundamentalists waging war against the government. President Liamine Zeroual proposed the date to Algerian political parties and leaders who support the election under the terms set by the government, and they accepted it, presidential spokesman Mihoub Mihoubi told the state-run news agency APS. The banned Islamic Salvation Front (FIS) and the main legal opposition parties have rejected the terms set by the government for the voting. Algeria has been torn by violence since the army stepped in to cancel January 1992 elections that the FIS was poised to win. The war has claimed an estimated 30,000 lives.

4 Sudan rebels executed by SPLA

KAMPALA (R) — Sudanese rebels executed four of their men by firing squad for killing two Ugandans who had allegedly failed to pay for weapons, witnesses said on Friday. They told Reuters the Sudanese People's Liberation Army (SPLA) executed four rebel privates late last month in South Sudan at Pagea, eight km (five miles) north of the border with Uganda. Six northern Ugandan leaders were taken to witness the killings. The northern Ugandan leaders told Reuters the four SPLA fighters had regularly sold AK-47 assault rifles to the two Ugandans, who sold them on to the cattle-raising Karamojong tribe. But the two Ugandans were murdered after they said they could not pay for one set of weapons as they had been stolen.

Engine blast behind U.S. 'copter crash

NICOSIA (AP) — Investigators are checking reports that an engine explosion may have caused the crash of a U.S. military helicopter earlier this week, a U.S. diplomat said Friday. "It is not clear yet what caused the crash but indications are it was an accident," said Alejandro Wolff, a U.S. embassy charge d'affaires. "A report that the crash was preceded by an explosion in one of the engines is also being investigated," Mr. Wolff said. Cyprus police patrol boats continued searching Friday for the four U.S. arimen. who have been missing since their Black Hawk helicopter crashed about five kilometres south of the fishing port of Zivi. Mr. Wolff said a U.S. navy salvage vessel was due off Ziyi to try to recover the main wreckage of the helicopter, which is at a depth of about 20 metres.

Over 70 killed in Morocco flash floods

RABAT (AFP) — Flash flooding triggered by heavy rains has killed at least 73 people in southern Morocco, officials said. The Marrakesh area was whipped overnight by violent storms which came after months of severe drought. Heavy loss of life and material damage were registered in the village of Sti Fadma, Ourika, Moulay Brahim, Ouirgane and Zerkten, officials said. Authorities went to the scene of the disaster to provide aid to the beleaguered population and King Hassan II gave orders for relief material to be sent to the area.

Second Paris blast in one month raises French fear

PARIS (Agencies) — As police maintained a huge security presence in the French capital on Friday, following the second bomb in the city centre in three weeks, authorities admitted they had few leads to go on.

"At this point in the investigation, nothing allows us to conclude that the same people are responsible for both attacks," a police spokesman

One thing, however, was clear, police said: The bomb was intended to kill.

Cairo newpapers demand retribution for PoW killings

CAIRO (AP) - In their first killed thousands of Egyptian reaction to Israeli killing of Egyptian prisoners of war (PoWs), opposition newspapers on Friday urged retribution against the killers and criticised the government for not taking a tougher stand on the issue

"It is our right as Egyptians to call for banning prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin from Egypt and cut all contacts with him no matter what the price," Managing Editor Abbas Al Tarabily wrote in the newspaper of the Wafd

In a column, Mr. Tarabily referred to Israel's demand for revenge for the killing of Jews, especially anyone who took part in the holocaust in World War II.

"If Israel chases whoever killed a Jew, so what are we going to do to those who PoWs?" he asked. The scandal over the killing of Egyptian prisoners of war began two weeks ago when retired Israel General Arye Biro admitted he ordered 49 of them executed during the 1956 Mideast war.

Other reports of the sum-mary executions of Egyptian PoWs have since surfaced in Israel, and some Israeli historians have said thousands of Egyptian prisoners may have been killed in Mideast wars in what amounted to an unofficial Israeli policy.

The editor of Al Ahrar, Mustafa Bakri, criticised the government's quiet handling the issue.

"The least we can do is to expel the Israeli spy who is considered an ambassador and to try those war criminals and demand retribution," he wrote. "The blood of those martyrs is haunting us.... It would be a shame if we didn't take revenge from the bloodsuckers.

The Egyptian government asked for an investigation of the reports of the 49 deaths.

The group, led by former cabinet minister Arjun Singh, has accused Prime Minister P.V. Narasimha Rao of ignoring the Gandhi family's political legacy.

Some Congress members were quick to press Sonia Gandhi to take over the party leadership after her husband's death, but she turned down the offer.

Younger smokers 5 times more likely to have heart attack

LONDON (AFP) - Smokers in their 30s and 40s have five times as many heart attacks as non-smokers, according to the largest study of heart attack survivors. yet carried out in Britain, the results of which were published Friday. The study, published in the British Medical Journal, also shows that smoking low or medium tar cigarettes did little to diminish the risk of a heart attack. More than 10,000 hospital patients who had suffered heart attacks were questioned about their smoke ing habits. Smokers in their 70s had twice as many heart, attacks as non-smokers, the study found, and among smokers in their 50s heart attacks were three times as common. But there were five times as many smokers in their 30s and 40s who had heart attacks as non-smokers: Until now doctors had believed smokers in this age group faced a three-fold greater risk, the report said. The researchers found a very slight difference in the incidence of heart attacks be tween those who smoked low tar as opposed to medium tar brands, but they believe the difference is not sufficient to say the lower brands are safe er. Dr. Rory Collins, a senion research fellow at Oxford University who helped organ nise the study, said an esti-mated 20,000 people under the age of 50 suffered heart attacks in Britain each year

But he added that for people who give up smoking the risks drop away very rapidly
